The Amefa brand

Setting tables around the world since 1931.

At Amefa we think differently and we are constantly challenging and developing ourselves, taking inspiration from on-trend home-deco designs to bring fresh, fun and exciting ideas to your table.

Enjoy everyday life

Amefa offers a wide range of flatware and kitchen products. Whether it is breakfast with family, dining with friends, or a festive barbecue in the garden, we have a suitable product for every occasion. Amefa makes the everyday pleasures of good food even more enjoyable.

Amefa 18-10 flatware

A wide range of patterns with great diversity to suit every style. The designs vary from very classic and traditional to very contemporary. 18-10 stainless steel indicates 18% of Chromium and 10% of Nickel. A good combination of the advantage of Chrome (corrosion resistance) and the brightness of Nickel. 18-10 stainless steel is therefore very durable and keeps its shiny finish for a long time.

All our flatware is dishwasher safe.

Did you know?

- Up until the 17th century most people only had spoons and knives. The Italians first introduced the fork at the end of the 16th century, where the rest of Europe adopted it much later.
- Fourchette or gaffel? Cuchillo or coltello? There's lots of languages spoken at our table. Amefa flatware is sold in more than 70 countries worldwide.
- The first recorded use of the word flatware was around 1297, on a tax return.

The image shows a steak knife with a dark wood handle and a serrated blade. The knife is positioned diagonally across the frame, resting on a white plate. The blade has the brand name 'Amefa' engraved on it. In the background, there is a piece of cooked meat, possibly a steak, garnished with herbs and a slice of orange. The entire scene is set against a wooden cutting board.

Steak knives

A steak knife is a sharp dinner knife, which is often featured with a serrated blade, used for cutting that well prepared ribeye, T-bone or fillet mignon...

These steak knives emerged during the 1940s and became an instant hit. Prior to that, all table knives were sharp, but required frequent upkeep – sharpening and polishing. With the decline in domestic workers (household servants), this up-keep became less feasible.

In the 1950s heat treatment of stainless steel was introduced, allowing knives to remain sufficiently sharp without needing serrations, but by this point serrated steak knives had become well-established and continued to be best sellers.
