“I mostly used my first reCAP for smoothies and shaking protein. But there are so many uses around the house since I do use mason jars to store dry goods such as pastas, flours, sugars, grains, nuts, cereals, beans, rices, etc. The pour spout will make it that much easier to store and access all my pantry ingredients”

“This works great. Perfect fit on my regular mouth jars. It is easy to clean. It fits tightly with no leakage. We store everything (coffee, sugar, baking soda, dog treats, etc) in glass jars so it is nice to find a great reusable alternative to other products I’ve tried. This would also work if you wanted to make one of those super cute mason jar gifts. I love it!”

Goin' Explorin' Storybook

GE-1

Goin' Explorin' is a 64 page illustrated story about two wide-eyed young explorers who meet and embark upon an adventure of discovery. Along the journey, the two friends light up the night by catching fireflies in a Mason jar. Written by Mary Arete Moodey and illustrated by Justin Wisniewski, the storybook was inspired by the creation of reCAP Explore.

Catch Me. Watch Me. Let Me Go.

"The EXPLORE is a 32 oz. mason jar made of plastic. Translation: it's light and completely droppable! The base of the lid glows in the dark making it more fun and useful during night explorations and the attached handle is perfect for little hands."
-Melissa

"Received as gifts for our 3 grandsons ranging in age from 4 to 22 months. They absolutely LOVE them! We stayed up the other night and caught fireflies. Even the 22 month old totes his around. They are sturdy and easy for kids to use with the flip-up lids. The glow-in-the-dark rims were great when we tucked the boys into bed with their jars on their bedside tables. The downloadable activity book has kept the 3 and 4 year-old busy for hours! Learning is FUN!"
