GLUGGLE JUG

Collection

MADE IN ENGLAND SINCE 1867

The Perfect CENTERPIECE

Since the late 1800s, Gluggle Jugs have been bringing entertainment and novelty to our tables, glugging merrily when poured from three quarters full. As a fully functional water jug, these unique and quirky pieces provide a practical addition to any dining table while adding a twist of humour.

These 'glugging' jugs have a rich history, with the earliest designs being traced back to the 19th Century. Their rise to popularity came in the mid-1900s, when Dartmouth Pottery began producing their own range and a pair of bespoke jugs were gifted to the Royal Family on a visit to the Britannia Naval College in 1958. These fascinating water jugs soon became collectables, with particular designs still sought after.

Today, Wade produce a range of 'glugging' jugs which have been fondly named Gluggle Jugs in recognition of their long history of bringing unique sound to meal tables across the world. These charming jugs are the perfect centerpieces, combining character, fun and tradition with functionality.

Our range is expansive and growing. From our original jug, we've widened the range to include 3 different sized versions of our classic fish design, providing an option for all requirements and tastes. Whether you're pouring a fine spirit, fresh water, or a sweet dessert wine, we have a Gluggle Jug to suit you.

Our jugs also come in a wide array of patterns and colours and can be fully personalised. From elegant pastel to vibrant, patriotic flags, there is a Gluggle Jug design for you.

Produced in Stoke-On-Trent, England, our jugs display the true capabilities of Wade's design and manufacturing expertise, making use of the finest British raw materials and skilled craftsmanship to produce timeless classics which put the fun into pouring.
