Housewares manufacturer Epoca International has announced the completion of the move to its new corporate headquarters in Boca Raton, Florida. Epoca, home to Ecolution Cookware, Primula Beverage Products and Cooking Light home goods, has seen tremendous growth in both sales and its employee base and has answered its growing requirements with a state of the art facility.

In addition it boasts dedicated graphics development facilities including an in-house photo studio, an innovation center for product development and next-generation collaboration and communication technologies. The offices also feature enhanced employee facilities with such highlights as filtered water refilling stations to reduce waste, a goal also reflected in their ecologically focused products.

“The new offices are a reflection of our ongoing commitment to our employees and customers as we celebrate our 25th anniversary, and will provide room for continued expansion,” said Steven Melzer, CEO of Epoca International. “We are excited to be settled in our new facilities and continuing the tremendous work of creating innovative and customer-focused products available through our retail partners,” continued Brian Melzer, President of Epoca International.
